Job Description

Morgan Stanley's Fixed Income operation in Asia offers a wide range of products and services to clients situated all across Asia. The division's sales and trading teams for commodities, credit, interest rate and currency products are organized by geographical regions, allowing each analyst to develop a sound understanding of a wide scope of products. The smaller and leaner structure of the Asian offices will allow analysts to work closely with the more senior salespeople, traders, research teams, and other Morgan Stanley Fixed Income divisions all around the world.

Responsibilities: Morgan Stanley is a global leader in Fixed Income products, providing individuals, corporations and sovereign states around the world with a wide range of services. Analysts are offered the unique opportunity to leverage and develop both their quantitative and analytical skills as well as their interpersonal and communication skills. As an Analyst in the Fixed Income Division you will be assigned to a product area where you will work with traders, salespeople, research, and capital markets professionals. You will be responsible for assisting in financial engineering and marketing efforts, developing analytic models and performing interest rate or credit research and monitoring market opportunities. Successful Fixed Income Analysts are insightful, creative quantitative thinkers who are able and willing to interact with a variety of colleagues in a dynamic environment.

Qualifications: Masters Degree – graduating in 2006

Attributes:

- Both oral and written fluency in English
- Outstanding academic records
- Strong interest in financial markets
- Teamwork initiative, enthusiasm and motivation
- Commitment and strong work ethic
- Ability to multi-task and prioritize

Career Path: Potential to be promoted to Associates, with increased responsibility and senior contact within the Fixed Income Division.
